

the sole authority of making war and peace, are the true marks of sovereignty.

A mighty hunter thence he shall be fill'd
Before the Lord; as in despite of heav'n,
Or from heav'n, claiming second sovereignty.
Nothing does to gratify a haughty humour, as this piece of usurped sovereignty over our brethren. Govern. of the Tongue.
Jove's own tree,

That holds the woods in awful sovereignty,
Requires a depth of lodging in the ground;
High as his t' most boughs to heav'n ascend,
So low his roots to hell's dominion tend.

I well foresee, whene'er thy suit I grant,
That I my much lov'd sovereignty shall want,
And her new beauty may thy heart invade.
Let us above all things possess our souls with awful apprehensions of the majesty and sovereignty of God. Revera.
Alexander's Grecian colonies in the Indies were almost exterminated by Sanderottus; Seleucus recovered the sovereignty in some degree, but was forced to abandon to him the country along the Indus.

Souci. n. f. [from sois, French.] A subterraneous drain.
Yet could not such mines, without great pains, and charges, if at all, be wrought; the dells would be so flown with waters, it being impossible to make any addits or soings to drain them,
that no gins or machines could suffice to lay and keep them dry.

Another of like sort, was found in sinking a soing-pit at Haigh in Lancashire. Woodward.
Souci. n. f. The preterite and participle pass. of sois.
I am soing of them that asked not for me: I am found of them that soing me not. Isa. lxx. 1.
The works of the Lord are great, soing out of all them that have pleasure therein. Psal. cxi. 2.

Souci. n. f. [rapel, Sax. soch, Dan. soch, Islandick; soel, Dutch.]
1. The immaterial and immortal spirit of man.
When death was overcome, he opened heaven as well to the believing Gentiles as Jews: heaven till then was no receptacle to the sois of either. Hooker.
Pie, he, unrepentant tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferred
With twenty thousand sois-confirming oaths. Shakespeare.
Perhaps, for want of food, the sois may pine;
But that were strange, since all things bad and good;
Since all God's creatures, mortal and divine;
Since God himself is her eternal food. Davies.
He remembered them of the promises, seals and oaths, which by public authority had passed for concluding this marriage, that these being religious bonds betwixt God and their sois, could not by any pellick act of state be dissolved. Hayward.
Eloquence the sois song charms the sense. Milton.

2. Vital principle.
They say this town is full of cozenage,
Drug-working forerers that change the mind;
Soul-killing witches that deform the body;
And many such like libertines of sin. Shakespeare.
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That sois of animals insule themselves
Into the trunks of men. Shakespeare. Merch. of Venice.
Thou fun, of this great world both eye and soul. Milton.
Join voices all ye living sois! ye birds,
That singing up to heav'n gate ascend,
Bear on your wings, and in your notes his praise. Milton.
In common discourse and writing, we leave out the words vegetative, sensitive, and rational; and make the word soul serve for all these principles. Watts.

3. Spirit; essence; quintessence; principal part.
He has the very soul of bounty.
Charity the soul of all the rest. Shakespeare.
4. Interior power.
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out. Shakespeare.
5. A familiar appellation expressing the qualities of the mind.
Three wenches where I stood, cry'd:
"Alas, good soul!" Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.
This is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you. Shakespeare. Hen. IV.
The poor soul sat singing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow:
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee. Shakespeare.
Unenlarged sois are disgusted with the wonders of the microscope, discovering animals which equal not a pepper-corn. Watts.

6. Human being.
The moral is the case of every soul of us. Estrange.
Keep the poor soul no longer in suspense,
Your change is such as does not need defence. Dryden.
It is a republic; there are in it a hundred bourgeois, and about a thousand sois. Addison's Italy.
My state of health none care to learn;
My life is here no soul's concern. Swift.

7. Active power.
Earth, air and seas, through empty space would rowl,
And heav'n would fly before the driving soul. Dryden.
8. Spirit; fire; grandeur of mind.
Intelligent being in general.
Every soul in heav'n shall bend the knee. Milton.

Sou'LED. adj. [from soul.] Furnished with mind.
Gripping, and still tenacious of thy hold,
Wou'd'st thou the Grecian chiefs, though largely soul'd, Shou'd give the prizes they had gain'd before. Dryden.

Sou'LESS. adj. [from soul.] Mean; low; spiritless.
Slave, soulless villain, dog, O rarely base! Shakespeare.
Sou'LSHOT. n. f. [from soul and shot.] Something paid for a soul's requiem among the Romanists.
In the Saxon times there was a funeral duty to be paid, called pecunia sepulchralis & ymbelun animas, and a Saxon soul- shot. Ayliffe's Pervogen.

SOUND. adj. [rumb, Saxon.]
1. Healthy; hearty; not morbid; not diseased; not hurt.
I am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man. Shakespeare's King Lear.
He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks. Shakespeare.
He hath received him safe and sound. Luke xv. 27.
We can preserve
Unhurt our minds, and understanding sound. Milton.
The king visits all around,
Comforts the sick, congratulates the sound;
Honours the princely chiefs. Dryden.
But Capys, and the rest of sounder mind,
The fatal present to the flames design'd,
Or to the deep. Dryden.

When a word, which originally signifies any particular object, is attributed to several other objects, on account of some evident reference or relation to the original idea, this is peculiarly called an analogical word; so a sound or healthy pulse, a sound digestion, sound sleep, are all so called, with reference to a sound and healthy constitution; but if you speak of sound doctrine, or sound speech, this is by way of resemblance to health, and the words are metaphorical. Watts's Logic.

2. Right; not erroneous.
Whom although to know he life, and joy to make mention of his name; yet our soudest knowledge is to know, that we know him not as yetted he is, neither can know him; and our safest eloquence concerning him is silence. Hooker.
Let my heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. Psal. cxix. 80.
The rules are sound and useful, and may serve your devotion. Watts.

3. Stout; strong; lusty.
The men are very strong and able of body; and therefore either give sound strokes with their clubs wherewith they fight, or else shoot strong shots with their bows. Abbot.
4. Valid; not failing.
They reserved their titles, tenures, and signories whole and sound to themselves. Spenser's Ireland.

5. Fast; hearty. It is applied to sleep.
New wak'd from soudest sleep,
Soft on the flow'ry herb I found me laid
In balmy sweat. Milton's Paradise Lost.

SOUND. adv. Soundly; heartily; completely fast.
The messenger approaching to him spake,
But his waste words return'd to him in vain;
So sound he slept that nought might him awake. Po. Queen.

SOUND. n. f. [from soude, French.] A shallow sea, such as may be sounded.
The sound of Denmark, where ships pay toll. Camden.
Wake,
Behold I come, sent from the Stygian sounds,
As a dire vapour that had cleft the ground,
T'ingender with the night, and blast the day. Ben. Johnson.
Him young Thoofa bore, the bright increase
Of Phorceys, dreaded in the sounds and seas. Pope.

SOUND. n. f. [from soude, Fr.] A probe, an instrument used by chi-rurgeons to feel what is out of reach of the fingers.
The patient being laid on a table, pass the sound till it meet with some resistance. Sharp's Surgery.

TO SOUND. v. a.
1. To search with a plummet; to try depth.
In this secret there is a gulf, which while we live we shall never sound. Hooker.
You are, Hastings, much too shallow
To sound the bottom of the after-times. Shakespeare. Hen. IV.

2. To try; to examine.
Has he never before sounded you in this business. Shakespeare.
Invites these lords, and those he meant to sound. Daniel.
I was in jest,
And by that offer meant to sound your breast. Dryden.
I've sounded my Numidians, man by man,
And find 'em ripe for a revolt. Addison's Gen.

3. To

To SOUND. v. n. To try with the sounding line.
The shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country and sounded and found it near twenty fathoms. Aët. xxvii.
Beyond this we have no more a positive distinct notion of, infinite space than a mariner has of the depth of the sea, where having let down a large portion of his sounding-line, he reaches no bottom. Locke.

SOUND. n. f. The cattle-fish.
SOUND. n. f. [from son, French; sonus, Latin.]
1. Any thing audible; a noise; that which is perceived by the ear.
Heaps of huge words uphoarded hideously
With horrid sounds, though having little sense,
And thereby wanting due intelligence,
Have marred the face of goodly poetry,
And made a monster of our fantasy. Spenser.
Come, sisters, cheer we up his frights,
And shew the best of our delights;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Dash a stone against a stone in the bottom of the water, and it maketh a sound: so a long pole struck upon gravel in the bottom of the water, maketh a sound. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The warlike sound of trumpets loud.
Where'er he spoke his voice was heard around,
Loud as a trumpet with a silver sound. Dryden.
That which is conveyed into the brain by the ear is called sound; though, 'till it affect the perceptive part, it be nothing but motion. Locke.

2. Mere empty noise opposed to meaning.
He contented himself with doubtful and general terms, which might make no ill sound in mens ears. Locke.
Let us consider this proposition as to its meaning; for it is the sense and not sound that must be the principle. Locke.

TO SOUND. v. n.
1. To make a noise; to emit a noise.
From you sounded out the word of the Lord. Thes. i. 8.
I rumpt once more to sound at general doom. Milton.
That with one blast through the whole house does bound,
And full taught speaking-trumpets how to sound. Dryden.
Thither the silver sounding lyres
Shall call the smiling loves and young desires. Pope.

2. To exhibit by likeness of sound.
Why do you start, and seem to fear
Things that do sound to fair? Shakespeare.
They being told there was small hope of ease
To be expected to their evils from hence,
Were willing at the first to give an ear
To any thing that sounded liberty. Ben. Johnson's Catiline.
This relation sounds rather like a chymical dream than a philosophical truth. Wilkins's Mat. Magic.

TO SOUND. v. a.
1. To cause to make a noise; to play on.
And many nymphs about them flocking round,
And many tritons, which their horns did sound. Spenser.
Michael bid sound
Th' archangel trumpet.
Mifenus lay; none so renown'd
The warrior trumpet in the field to sound;
With breathing brass to kindle fierce alarms,
And rouse to dare their fate in honourable arms. Dryden.

2. To be taken or direct by a sound.
Once Jove from Ida did both hosts survey,
And, when he pleas'd to thunder, part the fray;
Here heav'n in vain that kind retreat should sound,
The louder cannon had the thunder drown'd. Waller.

3. To celebrate by sound.
Sun, sound his praise. Milton.
SOUNDBOARD. n. f. [from sound and board.] Board which propagates the sound in organs.
Try it without any soundboard along, only harpwise at one end of the string. Bacon's Natural History.
As in an organ, from one blast of wind,
To many a row of pipes the soundboard breathes. Milton.

SOUNDING. adj. [from sound.] Sonorous; having a magnificent sound.
Obsolete words may then be revived, when more sounding or more significant than those in practice. Dryden.

SOUNDLY. adv. [from sound.]
1. Healthily; heartily.
2. Lustily; stoutly; strongly.
When Duncan is asleep,
Whereto the rather shall this hard day's journey
Soundly invite him. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
They did play
My feet and hands with cords, and to the mast
With other huffers made me soundly fast. Chapman's Odyssey.
Who had so often in your aid
So many ways been soundly paid;
Came in at last for better ends.
Have no concern,
Provided Punch, for there's the jest,
Be soundly maul'd, and plague the rest. Swift.

Their nobility and gentry are one half ruined, banished, of converted: they all soundly feel the smart of the last Irish war. Swift.

3. Truly; rightly.
The wisest are always the readiest to acknowledge, that soundly to judge of a law is the weightiest thing which any man can take upon him. Hooker.
The doctrine of the church of England, expressed in the thirty-nine articles, is so soundly and orthodoxly settled, as cannot be questioned without extreme danger to our religion. Bacon.

4. Fast; closely.
Now when that idle dream was to him brought,
Unto that elfen knight he had him fly,
Where he slept soundly, void of evil thought. Fairy Queen.
When the succession of ideas ceases, our perception of duration ceases with it, which every one experiments whilst he sleeps soundly. Locke.

SOUNDNESS. n. f. [from sound.]
1. Health; heartiness.
I would I had that corporal soundness now;
As when thy father and myself in friendship
First tried our soldiership. Shakespeare.

2. Truth; rectitude; incorrupt state.
In the end, very few excepted, all became subject to the sway of time: other odds there were none amongst them, saving only that some fell sooner away, and some later from the sound- ness of belief. Hooker.
Lelly is misled in his politics; but he hath given proof of his soundness in religion. Swift.

3. Strength; solidity.
This pre-supposed, it may stand then very well with strength and soundness of reason, even thus to answer. Hooker.
SOUR. n. f. [from sois, French.] Strong decoction of flesh for the table.
Spongy morels in strong ragouts are found,
And in the sois the slimy snail is drown'd. Gay's Trivia.
Let the cook daub the back of the footman's new livery, or,
when he is going up with a dish of sois, let her follow him softly with a ladle-full. Swift.

SOUR. n. f. [run, rump, Saxon; sur, Welsh.]
1. Acid; austere; pungent on the palate with astringency, as vinegar, or unripe fruit.
All sois things, as vinegar, provoke appetite. Bacon.
Their drink is sois. Hof. iv. 18.
But let the bounds of licences be fix'd,
Not things of disagreeing natures mix'd,
Not sweet with sois, nor birds with serpents join'd. Dryden.
2. Harsh of temper; crabbed; peevish; morose; severe.
He was a scholar,
Lofty and sois to them that lov'd him not. Shakespeare. H. VIII.
A man of pleasant and popular conversation, rather free than sois and reserved. Wotton's Life of the Duke of Buckingham.
Tiberius, otherwise a very sois man, would punctually perform this rite unto others, and expect the same. Brown.
He said a sois thing to Laura the other day. Taiter.
Sullen and sois, with discontented mien Jocasta frown'd. Pope.

3. Attractive; painful.
Let me embrace these sois adversities;
For wise men say it is the wisest course. Shakespeare. H. VI.
4. Expressing discontent.
The lord treasurer often looked on me with a sois countenance. Gulliver's Travels.

SOUR. n. f. [from the adjective.] Acid substance.
A thousand sois to temper with one sweet,
To make it seem more dear and dainty. Spenser.

TO SOUR. v. a.
1. To make acid.
His angelick nature had none of that carnal leven which ferments to the souring of ours. Decay of Piety.
Thus kneaded up with milk, the new made man
His kingdom o'er his kindred world began;
'Till knowledge misapplied, misunderstood,
And pride of empire, sour'd his balmy blood. Dryden.
One passion, with a different turn,
Makes wit inflame or anger burn:
So the sun's heat, with different pow'rs,
Ripens the grape, the liquor sours. Swift.

2. To make harsh.
Tufts of grass sour land. Mortimer's Husbandry.
3. To make uneasy; to make less pleasing.
Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.
He brought envy, malice, and ambition into Paradise, which soured to him the sweetness of the place. Dryden.

4. To make discontented.
Not my own disgrace
Hath ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face. Shakespeare.
